Gen Hancock's Grandson is Dead—Sporting News—Disasters.

New York, July 13.—The committee to notify the candidates, arrived at Governor's Island on a special boat. They were met by Gen. Hancock in the parlor of his house. John P. Stockton presented the secretary, who read the official notification to Gen. Hancock, who had a few words of welcome for each. Stockton then turning to Wm. H. English, who occupied the same position in the room where Hancock had lately stood, said:

"The Cincinnati convention, with unanimity unparalleled, appointed us as a committee to wait upon you at such a time and place as would be most agreeable to you, and inform you in person and in writing of your nomination; I now have the honor to congratulate ourselves on the event, and present to you on the part of the committee, and in the name of the convention of the national democratic party, the official announcement of your nomination which will be read to you by the secretary."

The secretary then read the address, after which

MR. ENGLISH SAID: "Mr. Chairman and gentlemen of the convention: As a practical business man not much accustomed to indiscretion of action or circumlocution of speech, I will say plainly and in a few words, that I accept the high trust which you have tendered me, with feelings of profound gratitude, and that I will at an early date informally make an acceptance, which I am informed is usual on such occasions. In doing this I fully realize the great responsibility of the situation, care, turmoil, anxiety, misrepresentation and abuse which are certain to follow, and I understand thoroughly that all the resources and power of our political foes, from all parts of the land will be concentrated against us. In Indiana, my native State, where first the grand battle is to be fought, and probably the most important of all; but these are great occasions where a discharge of high duties are to be considered, and I shall not disregard the unanimous voice of the representatives of the majority of the American people which you speak for here to-day. [Applause.] I am profoundly grateful for the high honor which has been conferred and I have abiding faith that with the favor of the God of the people, we shall succeed in this contest."

The speaker was applauded at the close of his remarks, and then followed another hand shaking between the nominees, one on one hand and those assembled in the parlor on the other. Shortly after this the committee and their accompanying friends again boarded the Fletcher and left the island.

New York, July 13.—Gen. Stockton in behalf of the committee of the democratic national convention, in presenting Gov. Stevenson, its chairman to Gen. Hancock this morning, said: One of the ablest and wisest bodies of your countrymen ever assembled, have given you this nomination with perfect unanimity, and General, since that convention has adjourned, we, of that convention have been to our homes; we have seen our constituents; we have seen adopted by the convention, reversing the principal points of the same, and dwelling chiefly on the fraud issue. They say that his nomination was made alone on account of his conspicuous military services, and because of his services after the war was over in restoring union and harmony, and his fidelity to the Democratic principles, which the writers are assured will control his administration and protect alike the rights of the states and the United States subordinate military to civil power and do away with sectional agitation or malice. They closed with congratulation of the bright promise for the future of the country and assure Gen. Hancock of their personal confidence and esteem. A similar letter was also written to Gov. English notifying him of his nomination for vice-President. It is most complimentary in tone, both to English and to the Democracy of Indiana.

New York, July 13.—Gen. Hancock's grandson died this forenoon, from cholera infantum. This has depressed the General, and the visit of the committee of the national convention to tender the nomination, is, in consequence, purely formal. English reached Governor's Island at noon and was heartily greeted by Hancock. The committee left New York in a body and with the members of the national committee and other visitors are now on the island.

New York, July 13.—The Washington special to the Tribune says that Secretary Schurz has sent instructions to the agent of the Poncas to inform the Indians that there is no objection to their having their reservation in the Indian Territory, but they cannot be fed any where else. A part preferring to remain where they are as intimidated by Standing Buffalo, the second head chief, during a late visit to Washington, unless fed by the Government.
